

TIDEWATER DAY IS GLORIOUSLY KEPT

Tens of Thousands Visit Exposition to Participate in Public Observance.

PRESIDENT GOMPERS SPEAKS

Conspicuous in the Crowds Were Members of the Labor Unions.

JAMESTOWN EXPOSITION

GROUNDS, June 7.—It was Tidewater Jubilee Day at the Jamestown Exposition grounds, and gloriously was it kept. Through crowded the Exposition grounds. The day was fine, and the program devised for the day was such a keep up the interest and enthusiasm of all visitors from early this morning until late in the evening.

Not only were there thousands of visitors present from the Tidewater cities of Norfolk, Portsmouth, Newport News, Hampton, and the towns round about, but the people came from Richmond, Washington, Petersburg, and the cities of North Carolina.

It was perhaps the most successful day that the exposition has yet experienced. The thousands of schoolchildren, hundreds of cadets in gray uniform, and many Knights of Pythias of the Uniformed Rank, served no little to make the day gay and successful.

The workingman was also there with his family, because organized labor throughout Tidewater had decreed Jubilee Day a holiday, and urged all union men to attend the exposition. Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, and orator of the jubilee, himself urged all laboring men to be on hand. They were strongly in evidence, and contributed largely to the success of the day.

Crowd on Lee Parade.

As early as 8 o'clock this morning, when the ticket gates opened, there were people waiting at the main entrance for admittance. Lee Parade was the Mecca for everybody, the hour of 10 having been set for the opening number of the program and the rapidly arriving crowds being bent upon securing the most desirable points of vantage. A detail of the Powhatan Guards kept the parade clear of the crowds, so that there would be no interference with the parade of schoolchildren.

At 10 o'clock a cannon salute announced the opening, and spontaneously Phinney's United States Band began playing. Hundreds of schoolchildren were assembled in line on the east side of the parade, waiting the signal to start. The Norfolk city schools were the only ones represented as an organization, and Superintendent Doble estimated that there must have been in the neighborhood of 2,000 children in line.

The parade did not arrive at the grounds in time to make a showing as a body, but some of the young ones joined in the parade behind the Norfolk contingent. Norfolk county, Newport News, Hampton, Suffolk, Princess Anne county and Sussex county had large delegations, but the children were present individually only, and followed the Norfolk pupils.

Superintendent Doble and Principal Saunders led the parade of school children, and were followed by the corps of aids appointed to assist in the preparation of the program. The column passed in review before the grandstand, where the distinguished guests of occasion occupied seats. The stand was well filled with spectators.

Guard Mount.

The Twenty-third United States Infantry then treated the assembly to a guard mount, and immediately after the chorus of 1,500 voices, trained and directed by William Wall Whitfield, superintendent of the bureau of music of the exposition sang "The Star-Spangled Banner," following that with "Virginia," a poem by Mrs. Kate Mason Rowland, set to music.

Then, Harry St. George Tucker, president of the exposition, delivered the address of welcome. The festive chorus sang "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean" and "Freedom America."

Hon. Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, was introduced by J. S. Barron, president of the Tidewater day committee.

As a fitting climax of the morning's exercises, Captain Eugene Godel, of Paris, made his first ascension in his new air-ship.

The program for this afternoon included a baseball game between army and navy teams, an organ recital in the auditorium by J. Fowler Richards, a band concert by Phinney's Band in the auditorium, a drill by the cadets of Maryland Agricultural College.

TAKE FAMOUS GUNS TO THE EXPOSITION

Guns Captured at Yorktown, Va., October 19, 1781, and Presented to the Chatham Artillery by Gen'l George Washington, 1791.

The Chatham Artillery, of Savannah, Ga., an old and famous organization, sent its representatives to the recent Confederate Reunion in Richmond.

While here Mr. Clement Saussy, a member of the battalion, gave to a friend the picture reproduced above of two historic guns, the story of which is told in the lines inscribed beneath the picture.

These guns were carefully buried in a brick-walled vault during the War Between the States.

It is proposed by the Chatham Artillery to bring these guns to the Jamestown Exposition in honor of Georgia Day, June 10th, and of President Roosevelt's visit to the exposition on that day. The guns are treasured with the greatest pride by their possessors, and have been kept in splendid order.

HOLIDAY FOR ALL STATE OFFICERS

Governor Swanson Issues Order for Virginia Day at Jamestown Exposition.

MILITARY MAKE MANY PLANS

Busy Scenes at Armories Where Companies Are Getting Ready for Trip.

Governor Swanson spent much time yesterday arranging further details for Virginia Day at the Jamestown Exposition, which will be next Wednesday. His Excellency will leave for Norfolk at 7 o'clock to-night, and will not return here until the end of next week. He issued a proclamation yesterday, closing all the State offices on Wednesday, making the day a holiday, and urging all Virginians and former Virginians to join in making "home-coming week" a grand success.

Practically all the State officials and their clerks will go to the exposition on Wednesday, and no business will be transacted in any of the departments. Indeed, the offices will close Tuesday afternoon, and will not open until Thursday morning. Virginia Day promises to be a great success, and it is likely that on this occasion every member of the Governor's staff will attend the chief of the program, which was printed yesterday, set out all the features, and none promises to be more brilliant than the reception to be given during the evening by Governor and Mrs. Swanson in the Virginia Building.

The Governor is happy over the prospects of a successful day, and he has worked diligently in season and out to accomplish this end.

Plans of Military.

The military of Richmond are having their busy days now preparatory to the journey to the Jamestown Exposition and the encampment there. At the Seventeenth Regiment Armory and at the Blues Armory yesterday boxes were being filled with uniforms, blankets, and various other articles, and called up for shipment with the baggage. Everybody was working, and all were eager for the trip and the camp. Both commands will go down early to-morrow morning, but in separate trains, leaving this city about 1:30 A. M.

Adjutant-General Charles J. Anderson and Colonel Jo Lane Stern were visitors at the Seventeenth Regiment Armory last night, and will go down on the special train with the soldiers. Colonel C. A. Dempsey will also go down, either on the special or one of the regular trains. In fact, every military official of the State will be at Jamestown next week.

As far as can be ascertained now all the companies will average about fifty-five men. The Blues Battalion will be accompanied by their own band of twenty-five pieces, which will be used by the Seventy-second Regiment. This band is the only enlisted band in the State serving without pay. The drum corps of the Seventeenth Regiment will accompany the Richmond battalion.

Several of the companies report that it will be difficult for some of their men to secure permission from their employers to get off, but there are few complaints along this line, employers generally expressing a willingness to make sacrifices to accommodate their employees who are enlisted in the military. Captain E. M. Hardy stated last night that twelve or fifteen of his men had reported to him that they could not secure permission from their employers to make the trip without the men's losing their positions.

In this connection it may be recalled that the companies report that it will be difficult for some of their men to secure permission from their employers to get off, but there are few complaints along this line, employers generally expressing a willingness to make sacrifices to accommodate their employees who are enlisted in the military.

the horses unaccustomed to dragging the grim instruments of war or working in double and quadruple harness. Finally all was arranged satisfactorily, the bugle rang out, the whip was applied, and the column began to move southward on Eighth Street, the men khaki clad and very much in earnest, sitting the horses or mounted on the guns and caissons. It was an imposing spectacle, and one which reminded the older citizens of days when other Richmond young men, like these, the flowers of its manhood, started forth on a more momentous journey forty-six years ago. The young men of today wear as eager as those of war-times for the march, the field and the camp, and were equipped for service in every way.

Down Eighth Street to Main and into Main wheeled the martial cortege, slowly but steadily, with every man attentive to his business. Along the route the curb was lined with interested spectators, and many cheers went up for the artillerymen as they started on their long march. From Main the column wheeled into Ninth Street, thence to the Free Bridge and across to Manchester, where the boys were again cheered and attracted the attention of a large crowd scattered along the line of march. After taking dinner in Manchester, the battery, training resumed the march, and continued it until nightfall, when a stop was made and camp prepared for the night. Owing to the delay in starting, the Howitzers did not get further than eleven miles from Richmond.
